CHAPTER I

JESSAMY PEET could not flatter herself that her station was unique. That to itself added to her charm, increased the gray discomfort of her mental horizon; for Jessamy Peet would have told anyone, even the merest stranger, that her chief aim in life was to be "individual." To be different was her obsession.

She studied the fashions as assiduously as any woman, but in order that she might not, by fell chance, wear anything that suggested the prevailing mode. When her husband, Jessamy's son, to the rage of her mother, in the season of puffs she wore braids. In the high noon of curls she streaked her voluminous black hair to her broad, rather masculinely formed head, till, as her husband said, she looked like one of those distant ancestors whose Indian blood was supposed to mingle faintly with the more recent, and much more select, fluid of the Chadwick and the Vanoytons in the mixing and blurring of Jessamy Peet, nee Chadwick.

Jessamy herself thought that this latest coiffure made her resemble some of the rare old portraits in the family gallery—perhaps the lady of mystery, Mona Lisa, with the haunting, indescribable look. If John had drawn that comparison or had even flattered her in a general way, say, to a Redcliffe, but John Peet was not familiar enough with the old Italians to call them by name, even when he remembered their existence, which was less and less often as the years and a growing business in Chicago widened the distance between John Peet of today and the more who had gone homecoming through Europe with Jessamy seven years before. No, John Peet looked at the simonist, tall figure, the flushed olive skin, the black eyes, straight nose and streaked hair of his wife, and said:

"Say, Jess, you do look like an Indian, for sure."

And then, because she was his and the only really beautiful woman he had ever known, according to his standard, his standard being Jessamy—the only one used in gait at her with a large content. She had lately contested this idea, because real tragedy had occupied her world for a fortnight, tragedy precipitated by her husband's inability to perceive, let alone understand, her individuality, and this second J. Jessamy Peet was angry. To her nature, love was, consciously, the whole of life; and therefore must be fed with understanding. She inevitably translated all experience into the mental realm, analyzed it, interpreted and reinterpreted it, ere it was allowed to become a part of her—or even aside with a clear-cut finality such as only a man is capable of, or a man woman with a head like Jessamy's.

When Jessamy moved she moved as quickly that most persons who knew her reiterated her mother's words, "Jessamy is so impulsive." That was because her thought processes were almost subtle and deep. She never discussed or took counsel on her uncertainties. Silently, patiently, she searched her soul for conclusions which when found she instantly made manifest in action.

Universal Electric Household Appliances

$1.00 Cash
Balance
Monthly Payments

Oklahoma's Biggest

Electric Appliance Opportunity

STARTING TODAY, Monday, May 15, the electric dealers will sell any "Universal" electric household appliance for $1.00 cash, balance to be paid in five equal monthly payments. This offer will include every electric household device manufactured by Landers, Frary & Clark, originators of the famous "Universal" line, some of which are illustrated in this advertisement.

The dealers can afford to offer these easy payments for a limited time only—and to secure this advantage purchases must be made on or before June 15. There will be no extension of this offer.

Plan of Event

During the progress of this sale, each three days will be devoted to the demonstration of one "Universal" electric appliance—in order to thoroughly explain and demonstrate the good points of as many "Universal" electric appliances as possible.

Watch these advertisements for announcement of demonstration of the appliance in which you are particularly interested. Call on one of the dealers and ask about it or telephone PBX-14 and ask for a folder describing it.

The first three days of this event will be devoted to demonstration of the "Universal" electric flat iron, which is made in four sizes—3, 4, 5 and 6-pound sizes. Regular household size priced $3.50. Terms during this sale ONLY—$1.00 cash, 50c per month for five months.

Attend one of the demonstrations—see the "Universal" electric iron in use—feel the perfect balance of the iron—note the simple construction and the special heat storage features which make the "Universal" just as efficient in heavy flat work as in ironing dainty laces.

"Universal" Electric Flat Iron demonstrations will be conducted at each of the dealers listed below, May 15, 16 and 17. Come, bring your friends, and inspect the complete line of "Universal" appliances.

If you prefer, a salesman will be sent to demonstrate any appliance in your own home. Simply telephone one of the dealers and say, "Send salesman to demonstrate," naming the appliance or appliances in which you are interested.

The Saturday Night Players were entertained Saturday by Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Hervey, who had also as guests Mrs. Nina Black, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Emerson and Mrs. R. B. Tansell of Edmond, and Messrs. Harvey, Mauk and Carl Gowers. New members admitted were Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Preece and Dr. and Mrs. W. J. Maupin. High scores were made by Mrs. Black and Mr. E. M. Orr. The club will meet in two weeks with Mr. and Mrs. N. DeWitt Allen.

BROADWAY NO PLACE FOR ACTORS TO LOAF

NEW YORK, May 12.—Broadway, for many years the city's main artery for actors, is in future to be kept clear of idle members of the profession unless they keep moving, according to police court magistrates' decision today. Of six actors arrested for loitering, two were fined $1 each, two were paroled for further hearing and two were permitted to depart on announcing that out-of-town positions awaited them. "Broadway must not be used as a standing place by actors to impede pedestrians," ruled Magistrate Ten Elk.

G. O. P. AND ROOSEVELT HEADQUARTERS OPENED

CHICAGO, May 12.—James B. Reynolds, secretary of the republican national committee with his assistants, was to arrive in Chicago Monday from Washington for the republican national convention which opens here June 7. Western headquarters for the Roosevelt non-partisan league were opened here Monday, with H. Bettinghaus of Chicago in charge.

M. E. DISTRICT TO BE DIRECTED FROM AFAR

OKLAHOMA CITY will be placed in an episcopal district headquarters of which are to be located at Pittsburgh, Pa., as a result of a recommendation Sunday by the committee on episcopacy to the general conference of the Methodist Episcopal church at Saratoga Springs, N. Y. It is believed that the death of Bishop Robert McIntyre in Oklahoma City some time ago influenced the committee's recommendation.

ELECTRICAL INVENTOR DIES

GREAT BARRINGTON, Mass., May 12.—William Stanley, an inventor who contributed largely to the development of the electrical industry, died at his home here Sunday at the age of 53 years. The electrical transformer and the alternating current system of long distance light and power transmission were among the most important of his inventions, forming the base of all present distribution of electricity.
